FINAL APPROACH – Mission Story of 2019

Zoe was born with just 10 percent of a normal small intestine, which means her body can't get enough nutrients from solid food, and she has to be fed through a central line in her chest. She spent the first six months of her life at Lucile Packard Children's Hospital in Palo Alto where she nearly died. Now 13 months old, Zoe is back at home with her parents and older sister. But she still needs to see her doctors every other month, and that means a four-and-a-half-hour car ride one way. Zoe's mom, Mayra, had to quit her job to manage Zoe's extensive care, and with credit cards maxed out from medical expenses, travel is another significant cost to add to the family's bills. Luckily, a friend referred them to Angel Flight West, and we began flying Zoe to her appointments. "Angel Flight West has taken a huge load off our family," says Mayra, "it's such a gift. And to be able to get home on the same day as Zoe's appointments is amazing!"
